Setting New Norms: No Place for Harassment or Discrimination

From the AIA Minnesota Executive Committee

Two weeks ago, a New York Times investigation brought to light specific, well-documented accusations of sexual harassment and sexual assault made by five women against Richard Meier, FAIA - Pritzker Prize winner, AIA Gold Medalist, and member of the AIA College of Fellows. Within ten days, the AIA New York City Chapter rescinded the 2018 design awards it had been poised to present to Meier and to Peter Marino, FAIA, who has multiple pending and settled lawsuits in which he is cited for sexual harassment and racist behavior.

The situations described in the New York Times coverage of Meier are abhorrent. And yet while the details may have been surprising, the idea that Meier could have perpetrated such actions seemed to surprise almost no one. This was an open secret within the profession.

Meier's behavior is on the more extreme end of the spectrum, but it's also not an anomaly. There are innumerable, everyday instances of harassing and discriminatory behavior (based on gender, race, ethnicity, religion, and more) in architecture firms, on construction sites, at office social events, and at professional conferences. And throughout the nation, students too often witness and experience harassing and discriminatory behavior involving their professors and guest lecturers.

We, the Executive Committee of AIA Minnesota, are united in our conviction that all forms of harassment and discrimination are unacceptable and cannot be tolerated. We will be bringing forward to the AIA Minnesota Board of Directors specific recommendations for action related to who is lifted up as admirable members of the profession, how accusations of misconduct will be dealt with, what standards are set for leaders, and how risks will be proactively addressed. For specific actions recommended, read more »

Interrupting Bias to Counter Harassment and Discrimination: Twin Cities Sessions in April, Greater MN this May/Fall

Biases are created and reinforced by our environments and experiences. Bias can be unconscious or intentional and can be based on gender, race, ethnicity, income, physical ability, sexual orientation and other "differences that make a difference." And these biases can manifest in the form of harassment and discriminatory comments and behaviors.

Many of us witness biased behavior and feel paralyzed to respond; we're not comfortable, not practiced, in recognizing, interrupting, or addressing bias when we see it happening around us. The good news is that there are a variety of steps that you can take and ways to grow your comfort in responding to bias.

This popular and well-received interactive workshop was offered in 2016 and will be offered again four different times in April - April 16, 17, 20, and 27, 11:30 am - 1:00 pm (free of charge with lunch provided) in Suite 512 at International Market Square, just a few floors up from the AIA Minnesota office. In the session, we will utilize small and large group activities to explore examples and to grow your comfort in speaking up when you encounter biased behavior.

Also, in an effort to grow industry-wide engagement on topics of bias, harassment and discrimination, invitations to participate in these sessions will also be shared with ACEC-MN and AGC-MN. Register now »

Support Preservation Public Policy in Minnesota

The Preservation Alliance of Minnesota is seeking an AIA architect to provide examples of the role of preservation in their practice. Likely topics include federal and state preservation tax credits, bonding bill provisions and available incentives for preservation. No meeting attendance required. If you are interested, please email Sheri Hansen for more information.

LAKE SUPERIOR DESIGN RETREAT

The Lake Superior Design Retreat celebrated its 30th anniversary in February with nearly 140 attendees. Architects, designers, engineers, artists, and members of the general public interested in design met at Fitger's Inn in Duluth to hear six creative professionals tell their story. Below are some of the comments about the weekend:

- "This is a transformative, small-format, program."
- The strength: "The spirit and celebration of creativity."
- "The speakers were incredible. I only wish I had come sooner."
- "Two days of immersion in design, presentations about design, opportunities to discuss design...all in a unique setting."
- "Absolutely amazing group of speakers. Collegiality of the event is fantastic. Magical weekend to get inspired."
- "Superb presenters who all hit it out of the park, as usual."

WHAT IS YOUR DESIGN STORY?

Architects who have been a part of the "team" over the last thirty-five years share their stories.

John Barbour, FAIA, Shelter Architects

I heard about the Minnesota Design Team (originally called the Governor's Design Team) through colleagues at work. It sounded like a fun way to use my architectural skills to help with some real issues, so I signed up for my first visit, to Embarrass, in spring 1988.

The community was extremely organized and took care of all of our needs, from teaching us about their sauna customs to providing us with a tour of the community and providing us with a place to work. Following our visit, they pursued some of the options we developed and presented to them. One of the ideas was for them to develop an organized national tour of their unique collection of Finnish-style log homes. Within about two years, a story about the Embarrass Finnish home tours was on national television. Learn more >

SMALL FIRMS KNOWLEDGE COMMUNITY

As you all know, leaders of small firms are very busy practitioners. Often, there is no other staff to do the work that needs to be done. This is likely why we were unsuccessful in finding someone to continue chairing the Small Firms Knowledge Community. So, until further notice, this knowledge community will not be meeting. If anyone has questions, or would like to talk about reinvigorating the Small Firms Committee, we are happy to talk with you at any time. Feel free to reach out to either Deanna Christiansen, staff liaison, or executive vice president, Mary-Margaret Zindren.
