"Resilient Design" by Douglas Pierce

Douglas Pierce, AIA, is a senior Associate with Perkins + Will in Minneapolis and a member of the AREA Research Board Steering Committee.

Impacts from extreme precipitation, the urban heat island effect, extended heat waves, stronger wind storms, and more frequent ice storms and freeze/thaw cycles are beginning to affect buildings, their occupants, the surrounding landscape, and related public infrastructure. How do we thrive in a rapidly changing and more challenging world?

Douglas Pierce of AREA research will explore building-specific strategies in the newly developed Resiliency Action List (RELI-pronounced rely), a balloted, pilot phase consensus standard designed to complement existing leadership programs such as LEED and Sustainable Building (SB) 2030.

Learn about aspects of safer, healthier and more productive buildings and communities that are better adapted to handle weather extremes, economic turbulence, and crisis conditions.
