Executive Vice President's Message

THE ARCHETYPAL ARCHITECT

I have an experiment for you. You can try it anywhere there's a crowd – at an airport, a restaurant, the skyway, the grocery store, even the State Fair.

Scan the crowd and guess who might be an architect.

Then take it a few steps further. Guess who might work for an architecture firm. Who might be a current student of architecture? Then add in those who've dreamt of being an architect.

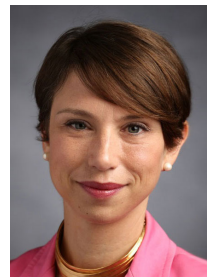

Odds are, you will start out with a pretty limited filter. While it may expand somewhat as you add students and dreamers, I expect there are people who your mind naturally excludes.

Now flip the experiment; try to think of everyone in your line of sight as an architect or an aspiring architect.

As an association executive, I've found this set of experiments to be incredibly eye-opening. I first started this experiment while working at a bar association and realizing the strength of the dominant view of what a lawyer looks like; what a judge looks like.

It's been nearly a year since I've joined AIA Minnesota's staff team. In that year, I've gotten to know hundreds of AIA members, read dozens of books and articles by and about architects, and watched videos and movies about architects. From this immersive experience, an image of the archetypal architect has settled itself in my mind.

The word "archetype" has an interesting etymology. While, according to Merriam-Webster, in everyday use the term most commonly refers to "a perfect example of something," it is worth understanding that the word derives from Greek and is formed from the verb "archein" – "to begin" or "to rule" – and the noun "typos" ("type"). In other words, the archetype is the beginning type or the ruling type.

Also noteworthy: psychologist C. G. Jung put forward a definition that refers to an archetype as "an inherited idea or mode of thought that is present in the unconscious of the individual."

Our unconscious mind shapes our worldview and our decision-making. How might the archetype of the architect be shaping the future of this profession? And how might we encourage a more inclusive model of an architect to take hold among clients, among young people, and within ourselves?

2016 LEGISLATIVE SESSION RECAP

Note: A more extensive legislative recap was sent to members via an e-mail on Wednesday, June 1.

Bonding Bill – Not Passed; Potential Special Session Action

AIA Minnesota has joined with the Building Jobs Coalition to urge a Special Session to ensure a strong bonding bill is enacted.

Proposal to Prohibit Specific Firms from State-Funded Work – Shut Down in Senate

AIA Minnesota led the charge to remove an amendment that would have specifically prohibited three firms – including an architecture firm – from work involving State dollars; attempting to subvert the Statute of Repose. The amendment was stopped on the Senate floor.

Omnibus Supplemental Budget – No Change to SDSB Thresholds; Potential 2017 Action

The supplemental budget bill signed by Governor Dayton did NOT include language that would have raised the thresholds for the State Designer Selection Board (SDSB). AIA Minnesota will be working with members and stakeholders to study the issue and to determine a specific recommendation for a threshold increase in time for the 2017 legislative session.

Transportation Bill – Not Passed; No P3 Pilot Established; Potential Special Session Action

Lack of action on a transportation bill also stalled a provision to establish a pilot for Public Private Partnership (P3) infrastructure financing. AIA Minnesota had successfully advocated for the inclusion of architects on the P3 advisory group. The transportation bill may resurface in a Special Session.

179D Tax Deduction Allocation Form Requirement – Not Passed; Potential 2017 Action

AIA Minnesota spearheaded support for legislation requiring governmental and higher-ed institutions to sign off on the 179D Federal tax deduction allocation forms. This legislation could move forward in the 2017 session.

Governor Dayton's conditions for a Special Session have so far been viewed unfavorably by Republican leadership, leaving great doubt as to when and whether a Special Session might be held.

IDP (now AXP)/ ARE

Find out about the many changes that are in the works for the Intern Development Program (IDP) and the Architect Registration Examination (ARE).

ARE 5.0

The new ARE 5.0 program is anticipated to launch in late 2016. It will feature six divisions that will more closely align to the day-to-day practices of today's architects. New testing technologies will be incorporated to replace the current graphic vignette software.

IDP IS CHANGING ITS NAME!

On June 29, the Intern Development Program will be renamed the Architectural Experience Program (AXP). The term "intern" will no longer be used. Instead, NCARB will reference those working toward licensure as "aspiring architects" or "exam candidates." Licensing boards, such as Minnesota's AELSLAGID Board, will have the authority to prescribe their own terminology for unlicensed professionals.

COMMITTEE NAME CHANGE

To reflect the name change of IDP, the AIA Minnesota IDP/ARE Committee is changing its name to the Architect Licensing Advisory Committee. Their new name will coordinate with NCARB's community of local, state, and university volunteers, called Architect Licensing Advisors.
